EPILEPSY (Apsmara)

In most Ayurvedic texts, epilepsy has been mentioned as Apasmara or Apasmruti, and has been described as one of the earliest eight diseases known (diagnosed) that can be controlled only with medical therapies and can sometimes be incurable and remain uncontrolled

... A wide variety of ghrtas (purified butters) have been recommended for internal use. Use of mixtures of ghrita and taila (oil) cooked with drugs has also been mentioned. Even nasyas (nasal applications) have been recommended. The use of a wide variety of anjanas (collyriums) and anjana vartikas (collyriu sticks) to bring the patient to senses has also been mentioned. The modes of administration of drugs for epilepsy recommended in Ayurveda include external applications, internal use, application in the eyes and nose.

We are managing such cases at our centre. Treatment varies from person to person. For further details, Visit :- Om Vedic Heritage Centre, 43 Tessensohn Road. Call 62972670 for an appointment with Dr Dharna
